No Legal Opinion Available On Gleason St. Project

Atty. Stulgis Is Writing Ruling

No one knows when the town will get a legal opinion on the proposed water installation on Gleason st.

Town Counsel Vincent A. Stulgis this week refused to say when he will deliver his opinion to the BPW.

"There are some matters I have to discuss with them", he asserted, before the opinion is ready. He declines to say what the matters are, however.

Money Voted

The problem came up when Fred Doyle inserted an article in the special town meeting asking for $5000 for a water main along Gleason st. Atty. Stulgis ruled that the appropriation would be illegal because Gleason st. is un-

Nov. Building Permits Total $642,400

Big Question For The Town: When Is A Way Not A Way?

When is a "way" a "way" and when is it an accepted "way" or a private "way" were questions that had the planning board baffled Monday night.

They were trying to interpret the statutes in relation to the planning board's authority over house lots on Gleason st. - whether it is a sub-division under the law or whether it is not within the planning board's province to act.

Sullivan Files Plan

Atty. Thomas Sullivan brought the matter up, with a letter to the board accompanied by a plan of lots on Gleason st.

He told the board that the term "way" as used in the law clearly meant any "way" that was in existence and along which vehicular traffic could pass - but was not a term used to describe only an

New building permits during November totalled $357,700, according to estimates of Building Inspector Ralph Coleman.

In addition, he authorized permits for additions and alterations estimated at $284,700.

Thus, building permits during November were valued at $642,400.

Largest among the additions were the West school and the Pike school addition.

New building permits were issued to Kenneth Thompson, Rocky Hill rd., residence and garage under; Tessier Realty Trust, Tessier dr., two houses with two-stall garages; Dennis Construction co., Dascomb rd.; Armand J. Ratte, Arcadia rd.; Lindsay Sheford, 174 Chestnut st.; Roland Davis, McKenney cir.; Roy R. Farr, three on Gould rd.; Thomas Sullivan, Gleason st.; Suburban Household Enterprise, Inc., North and River rd.; George Laaff, Reservation rd.; John Pickering, Holt rd.;

School Board Sees Plan For Modern School

An artists conception of the new Ballardvale school and some working drawings were shown to the school committee Tuesday night.

Perley F. Gilbert associates, the architectural firm doing the work, said the 12-classroom building - with core facilities for 18 rooms - should cost about $480,000 for construction alone at today's prices.

The school committee debated the size of the building for some time - with members in considerable doubt as to the number of rooms needed at the moment as opposed to a longer-range view. It appeared to be generally agreed, however, that the board would recommend a school at a specific size, without core facilities for any further expansion.

If that is done, the architects pointed out, for a 12-room school, then the price would be some less than their estimated construction cost which was based on larger core facilities.

COUTURE - BAMFORD

Miss June Bamford, daughter of Mrs. Irene Bamford, 21 Pelham st., Methuen, became the bride of Alfred Joseph Couture, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Couture, 128 Lowell st., at a 1 o'clock ceremony Nov. 27 in Mount Carmel church, Methuen. The Rev. William J. Dauphin S. M. officiated. Miss Patricia Guy, cousin of the bride, was the soloist, accompanied by the organist, Mrs. Rita Guy, aunt of the bride.

Given in marriage by her brother, William Bamford, the bride wore an ice blue gown of imported Chantilly lace over slipper satin styled with lace bodice, long pointed sleeves, jewel neckline studded with iridescent sequins and pearls, and pointed lace panels over the bouffant tulle skirt draping to a cathedral length train. A fitted cap studded with iridescent sequins and pearls held her veil of illusion and she carried a prayerbook marked with an orchid and streamers of lily of the valley and stephanotis.

The bridal attendants included Mrs. Francis Robichaud as matron of honor; Anne Couture, sister of the bridegroom, Beverly Welch and Jane Burke as bridesmaids. They wore identical gowns of satin and tulle, the honor attendant in orchid, while the bridesmaids wore aqua, exotic and dusk blue. All wore matching satin tiaras and carried cascades of matching chrysanthemums. The flower girls, Miss Cynthia Guy, cousin of the bride, and Miss Claire Couture, niece of the bridegroom, wore orchid and carried colonial bouquets.

Roland Couture served as best man for his brother and the ushers were Leon, Normand and Raymond Couture, all brothers of the bridegroom.

A reception in the American Legion hall in Methuen followed the ceremony, with many out-of-town guests attending.

Upon their return from a wedding trip to New York and Canada, the couple will reside at 21 Pelham st., Methuen.

Empty island in middle of Shawsheen square has been a source of irritation to bus riders, who once found benches on the island for their use. When police traffic booth was removed and tree cut down, benches were taken away. Police Chief David Nicoll said this week that the island is state-owned and that a bench will probably be placed on it next spring if the state approves. A resident also suggested recently that the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, operators of the buses through the square, put up a small shelter for cold-weather use of patrons but a spokesman for company said he doubted whether it would be done.

If his logic proves right, the planning board would not have jurisdiction over house lots on Gleason st., it was explained.

If in error, the planning board would then be required to consider it a sub-division and require all the plans and forms to be filed.

What Kind of Way?

Atty. Sullivan sought to prove that the present street, under the statute, could be considered a "way" and that it is passable for cars. He pointed out that the law specifies a sub-division to be the creation of two or more lots in which there is created the necessity of having a new "way".

Members of the planning board, after discussing the matter until their "ways" became tangled, decided to turn the whole matter over to the town counsel for an opinion.

He is currently studying the legality of the town spending money on Gleason st. for a water main, as voted by town meeting last month.

Disaster Struck With Call Of "Fire", But No One Knows Date Of Our Major Fire

By Kay Noyes

As one gazes at this old photograph taken somewhere around the year 1866, the first impression one gets is that of seeing the basic foundation work being done for the erection of a building even down to the ever present "sidewalk superintendents" overseeing the construction.

In reality it is the ruins of one of Andover's early catastrophes. This picture, taken the day after the fire, represents the remains of Jacob Abbot's furniture shop, one of the early furniture businesses in Andover as well as being the site of the present Memorial Hall Library.

Fire! Fire!

Early one warm day, the township was aroused by the cry of "fire" and by the time Thomas Smith, the foreman for the Shawshen Engine Co., could muster the volunteer fire fighters and have the hand pumps in full operation, the fire had become a wall of flames which threatened to destroy other businesses in the area. Although some 28 to 30 men strained with all their might to keep a steady stream on the blaze, the rampaging fire swept rapidly through the wooden structures. Turpentine and pots of cabinet makers' glue, which erupted over the structure, along with the kindled floor boards nurtured by years of sawdust which had crept into the cracks, gave vigorous energy to the raging blaze. The fire fighters were also greatly hampered by a wind which seemed to have "come from nowhere" to fan the fire into an unbelievable hot inferno.

Wet Down Area

The fire fighting equipment, being what it was in the days of horse drawn hand tubs, did little in saving the shop but succeeded in accomplishing the task of wetting down the surrounding lots thus preventing other buildings in the business section from igniting.

No Records

Mr. Abbot's establishment, along with the adjacent tailor shop, was a complete loss. Strangely enough, although the fire destroyed much of the business section in the town, very little can be found in regards to the story of the conflagration. Even the year in which it occurred is not too well established other than it took place either in the year 1866 or 1870.

Many Changes

It is easy to see the changes that time has brought about from the peaceful country square to the present active center of town. The horse and wagon in the background is in close proximity to the spot where our new traffic control booth is located. The large white house behind the flagpole was the home of John H. Flint, a leading citizen in the town and a cabinet maker by trade. You will probably recognize it as the Square and Compass club and also the headquarters of the Andover Red Cross.

The lane in the foreground would be the present entrance to Central and Essex streets and the dirt roads in the background bearing to the left would be the forerunner of the present Main st. as well as High st. The present Elm st. may be recognized as the street leading away from the ruins and other than being much wider today is in the same location as it was some 89 years ago.

Boom For Herter

There is currently underway a move to have Gov. Christian A. Herter run for the Presidency.

Although he does not make any statements declaring himself, we note with interest that the governor is accepting speaking engagements in many parts of the country — at a time when his name is being prominently mentioned everywhere.

Gov. Herter would make a good President, of that we are certain. His administration in this state has been a model of common sense, efficiency and sound public service.

We just want to add our voice to many others in suggesting that the "Herter Boom" be built into something substantial and serious throughout the country.

It is, after all, reasonable to assume that President Eisenhower may decide not to run for the office again. Thus, the Republican party should have some strong ideas as to its potential candidates so that the national convention will not deteriorate into a dog-fight.

Gov. Herter would be a fine candidate and should appeal to citizens of independent mind throughout the land, just as he has done here. Thus, we feel that an organized movement should be undertaken to promote his interests at the convention next year.

Your Attention, Please

We call your attention to a "letter to the editor" in this week's issue, commenting on the town's growth problems.

We feel it to be an excellent statement.

The problems of growth are many and they are expensive. We have several times suggested that the town should undertake improvements of existing facilities — water, drainage, sewage — both for the benefit of those persons now using the services as well as for individuals who some day may live here.

It seems important to us that poor water conditions in an area which is not currently being developed be improved, for the benefit of those people now living in that area. And we have suggested that the improvements be carried out in such a manner that newcomers will not be faced with present problems — that water and sewer lines be of sufficient size to serve the areas in question.

We believe that the statement in the "Letter to the editor" is a well thought out declaration and deserves your careful and thorough scrutiny.

accepted. The voters appropriated the money, however, and the BPW promptly asked for a ruling from town counsel on whether it could be spent.

Sullivan's Statement

Atty. Thomas Sullivan, meanwhile, told the BPW that Mr. Stulgis had orally told him the appropriation would be legal the morning before town meeting. Mr. Sullivan cited various statutes in his argument before the BPW that Gleason st. may have water mains installed, despite its status as unaccepted.

Mr. Stulgis last week said he was researching the matter thoroughly before giving an opinion. His comment on Atty. Sullivan's statement about initially approving the article was "I refuse to make a political football of the town counsel's job".

White Regretted Delay

BPW Chairman Sidney P. White commented two weeks ago that every day means a lot when winter approaches. He was referring to the necessity of moving with some speed on the water installation if it is to be done this year. At that time, he said "it is regrettable" that the town counsel had not, at that time, presented his opinion on the matter.

We cure insomnia

A lot of people in this town sleep better because of us.

Insurance of all kinds brings peace of mind. And peace of mind brings sleep.

For example, if a burglar visits you, don't let it disturb you. You know your loss is covered by an insurance policy on your household goods, personal effects, clothing, jewelry, furs, silverware, etc. It covers burglary, robbery and theft. And hold-up and theft away from home are covered, too!

You'll be surprised how little a Family Theft policy costs.

What Our Readers Say—

To the Editor of the Townsman:
The "status quo" or at best
"lets take care of ourselves first" philosophy expressed and reported in the last two editorials
of the Townsman is almost frightening in its implications. It is a philosophy that represents the antithesis of everything that has made America a great and wonderful and expansive country.

When my grandfather arrived in Philadelphia from Ireland in 1850, he reported that the water system and the drainage and other facilities were completely inadequate to take care of the existing citizenry let alone the influx of immigrants. It seems to me that probably the fathers or grandfathers of some of our own leading townspeople who now fear
this new influx, landed in Andover
at a time when their arrival greatly overtaxed the then existing facilities.

We can well wonder whether or not the great towns and cities of this nation grew and flourished in spite of the influx of new young immigrants or because of the vigorous young blood that was introduced into their midst.

I wonder where I and many of our fellow townsmen who are one or two generations removed from the "old country" would be if America had put up the Chinese wall that Andover now seems to be considering. Are we already so old and tired and pathetically unproductive that we can't figure out how to solve our drainage and water problems while we grow, instead of as a prerequisite to further growth.

In my business, I travel throughout the United States and a few foreign countries. It is almost laughable to read of Andover's
"problems" when compared to almost any city in this or any other country.

With an exploding population in the United States that has far outstripped all estimates, every city and town is faced with almost insurmountable problems —
and problems that are many times
more severe than Andover's.
Young people are growing up and marrying and raising families.
They have to live somewhere
— their children have to go to school somewhere, someone has to provide water and drainage for them. Are we all agreed that we should tell them curtly to look elsewhere to live and to work and to build their homes? Do we have some suggestions as to which cities and towns have excess capacity in their facilities, in their schools or on their highways? It's laughable if one believes there are cities or towns worth living in that do not have our problems several times over.

Often, what seems to be a problem can also be an opportunity.
If there is not enough water available on Elm or Brown streets to fight a fire then we should improve the service for the people who live there and at the same time improve it enough to take care of some additional future
residents.

Of all the cities and towns I have visited, I have seen few as attractive from so many points of view as is Andover. One way to keep it attractive and well equipped is to force ourselves to expand and modernize our facilities. Certainly it is going to cost money, but you get what you pay for. I think only those who are selfish or unrealistic

really hope to live in Andover at the same tax rate you will find in a city that is old and tired, ill-equipped and unattractive. Also,
I would assume that new residents would be paying taxes and carrying their own weight.

No one wants the unrestricted and uncoordinated expansion that goes with the erection of shabby, makeshift construction. That is why we have a planning board and zoning laws. But to simply put up our own iron curtain or Chinese wall and shut off all subdivisions, even temporarily, can be the start of an insidious and deadening disease. It can be like rent controls with its killing effect on new construction that are put on "temporarily", and then stay with us for years, or,
as in the case of France, for 40 years.

It begins to look as if "to catch up with needed improvements" we badly need some young blood to hasten the "catching up".

completely modern in design — with a huge glass wall in the library and much more glass than may be found in older types of construction. It includes, in addition to the 12 classrooms, a library; multi-purpose room for cafeteria, gymnasium and auditorium purposes; general purpose room for remedial reading, teachers' use, etc.; and a kindergarten.

Talking the matter over with the school committee was a group of Ballardvale and South Andover residents.

They included Albert Warner, Mrs. Vicky Wrigley, Mrs. Florence Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Marc Sweet, Robert Auchterlonie and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Moody.

The group expressed itself as being pleased with the looks of the school as shown in the tentative sketches.

Group Likes Design

School committee secretary William A. Doherty commented on the radical departure from the usual colonial design in town but was assured by the group that they liked the modern design and believed that it could be built at less expense than the colonial-type building.

The school committee agreed to meet soon with the State School Building assistance commission to discuss educational needs in the Ballardvale-South Andover school. Following that conference, it will be possible for the architect to come up with drawings and plans for presentation at town meeting.
